Introduction

When you find yourself in a situation where you have experienced harassment, discrimination or wrongful termination, please know that you are protected by California state and federal law. We want to help you get the compensation that you are entitled to. You need to know about these mistakes that could ruin the success of your claim.

Mistake

1

Delaying Reaching Out

If you don't reach out right away, you might miss your opportunity to receive justice. If your employer senses that you're really unhappy following the treatment you experienced in the workplace and they think a lawsuit is coming, they can destroy evidence. Also, some issues are time-sensitive and you should seek help from a lawyer right away.

Posting About Your Case on Social Media

2

The last thing you want is to go on a Facebook rant about your case and everything about it and have your employers show this as evidence in their case against you. You also don't want to talk about your claim on social media and have your employer find out that you're about to file before you're ready for them to know. Again, they can make evidence disappear.

Keeping Things from Your Lawyer

Always be completely honest with your lawyer. Don't exaggerate and also don't hold back. You want them to know everything so that they can prepare your claim fully. You would want to be up against your employer and have your lawyer unprepared because the employer has more knowledge of the situation than you told your lawyer. It's not a good situation for anyone.

Telling Your Former or Current Co-workers About the Case

4

Along the same lines as the other things you should be thinking about, you don't want your employer to have an advantage. You may really like your coworkers and think you can trust them, but you never really know how the grapevine might carry the news that you're going to file a claim. Next thing you know, you're trying to file a claim but the employer has "lost" all of your evidence.

5

Mistake

Spending the Winnings Before You Earn It

We know that in some cases you've heard of big winnings for cases. We urge you to be patient. Don't go and get a nice vehicle because you expect your case to win big. Be responsible. Don't spend money you don't have.

Mistake

6

Hiring the Wrong Lawyer

You might think that you can just reach out to the firm that helped you buy a house or the lawyer who handled your friend's divorce. You don't want someone working on your claim who is just dabbling in employment law. You want someone who does this every single day.

7

Thinking You Shouldn't File a Claim

You may be hesitant to file a claim because you're afraid of being fired by your employer. Please know that you're protected under the law from being retaliated against. If your rights are being violated by your employer, you should always go ahead and file the claim. You deserve that justice.
